

SENATOR WITEK: Are you saying mean things to me again over there?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: No, I had a smile, you can tell I'm not.

SENATOR WITEK: Okay.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Witek, have you ever had to dress your children in rags?

SENATOR WITEK: I have. I've had to garage sale and actually, I confess, I enjoy it. What can I say, I love a bargain.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So why should we let these people have clothes when you have had to dress yours in rags?

SENATOR WITEK: I have my light on to ask what kind of clothing we're including here, I mean are we...like name brand stuff or if they can't find anything at a garage sale that they can't afford like jeans for 15 cents and that kind of stuff?

SENATOR WILL: Where the legs of the jeans are the same length and...

SENATOR WITEK: Or hand-me-downs from...God forbid they should have to wear hand-me-downs, you know. I don't know. I don't know where we're going with this reform anymore.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: It seems to be too liberal though, doesn't it?

SENATOR WITEK: It does.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: She said it does. I'm beginning to see that we're having a problem, Senator Maurstad, with these bleeding heart liberals. I never knew Senator Matzke would fit in that category, but if working people cannot provide for their children without going to the rag house, why should we ask the taxpayers to do this? Senator Cudaback, you see what I'm saying, don't you? Senator Cudaback says, kind of, he's not sure that he goes that far. I'm not surprised that Senator Beutler would make this amendment. I believe he graduated from Yale, Yale University, one of those Ivy League schools, if you get my drift. So he is one of these bleeding heart liberals who
