will value you as you value yourself. If every time they run up to you with a little tablet and a stub of a pencil, you start just spilling all of your guts, then you're too easily accessible. If every time they put a camera in your face, you jump, and you want to spill everything you have to say. They realize you're too easily accessible. Many times they take these stories back and they have some nitwit sitting in a studio trying to say what it was that you said. Now maybe people are not careful in their choice of language as I am, but there is no two-bit anchor creature who can say what I want to say better than I can say it. So if my words are not to be used, I don't give the interview. Now if it's on a trifling subject, one something like the Forest Gumps of this society can understand, then I go ahead and give the interview. By the way, do you know why Forest Gump was so successful in America? Because at his level of operation he put all the Americans on an equal playing field. They could relate to Forrest Gump and they didn't even see it as satire. They saw this as real history. After they saw the movie "Forest Gump" they started running to the library to check historical sources to see why they had missed reading about Forest Gump shaking hands with President John Kennedy, taking a bath in the crystal pool in Washington, D.C. Then they were going to write letters to the editor condemning them for being revisionous of history by leaving out the substantial contributions of Forest Gump.

SPEAKER WITHEM PRESIDING

SPEAKER WITHEM: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: The fact that newspapers, the broadcast media and I include radio and television in that, don't use their offices to raise the level of understanding of the public is a slam against them. They're so busy hustling money that they've forgotten that their job is to inform. They fire editors, they fire reporters in order to reduce the staff to increase the profits and diminish the quality of the news gathering, the news reporting and the editorial writing. So they are becoming literally rags and corporation advertising pieces and nothing in the way of news organs.

SPEAKER WITHEM: Senato. Hall.

SENATOR HALL: Thank you, Mr. President and members. Senator Chambers, as Forest Gump said in that movie, I think it was
