

community-based programs to me is not only a prevention in some areas on down the road, I think it's looking at the things it can do as far as healing, with kids and young people and why we need to make that investment on the front end more than we do, I believe, on the back end of what's happening here. I also have some questions, number one, about age limits. The way the bill reads and perhaps, Senator Lindsay, maybe you can answer these for me.

SENATOR CROSBY: Senator Lindsay.

SENATOR HILLMAN: It talks about on page 3, line 4, the court may consider such commitment if the offender is male or female who is convicted as an adult. What type of age mix do you perceive in this boot camp? What could be the range of ages we're dealing with here in this facility?

SENATOR LINDSAY: You talking theoretical range, or...

SENATOR HILLMAN: Yes, I mean who would be eligible? What age range would...could be eligible for...

SENATOR LINDSAY: Any age range.

SENATOR HILLMAN: So we could have a real mix of ages here between young people and elderly people?

SENATOR LINDSAY: Well, I guess I should limit that remark a little bit. Young people would only be eligible for the boot camp if they had been convicted as an adult of a felony. So it would be just those who are tried as adults.

SENATOR HILLMAN: Okay, but it...you still could have a very...

SENATOR LINDSAY: Sure.

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...age range. Okay, that's one. Then one of the other was in looking if it didn't turn out and I think probably Section 28 on page 3,...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...line 17, if the offender for any reason fails to successfully complete the boot camp program, the sentence...the court may impose another sentence. In other
