

stack up offenses with reference to the use of a firearm. If, in order for the offense to be committed, you have to fire the firearm, for example, well, he gave his examples, you couldn't then make two offenses out of one. The example I was discussing with Senator Pirsch so that I wouldn't get lost in an explanation is if motor vehicle homicide constitutes being in a vehicle and causing somebody's death, you cannot separate that into two crimes, mainly mis...
