

talked to a number of troopers about difficulties they have had with Omaha officers and the most recent incident where these two patrol cars from Omaha were blocking traffic and having it backed up for miles was not the first instance of a problem with Omaha police officers. As a matter of fact, and I'm not aware that they had any dogs on the scene, they had invited this dancer, some people described her as a stripper, to perform at what they call a stag party, all these police officers in a basement, and I don't know if they were married or not, but I'm sure their wives were not there. So one of the officers took a belt and hit this woman on the buttocks. And she said, that doesn't go, and she objected. Then other cops started beating this woman. She had two bodyguards and at least one of them was on television showing the damage done to him by Omaha police officers. Those are the kind of people you have enforcing the law and carrying on in that fashion, and I'm supposed to trust them. I really don't. And when Senator Wehrbein comes back or I see him I'll ask him a question. Senator Wehrbein,...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Wehrbein.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...this question is to find out if you've made any progress.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Senator Chambers, I have made some progress, and...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: All right, then...

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: ...I'm inclined to take your offer and I'll tell you...can I...may I explain why?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Sure.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: My light is on.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I don't know whether I have any time left or not. Do I?

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator, there's two minutes left.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I'm not clear on what I can do or not do but I do think that the State Patrol has most of the dogs. I think
