should not take more than 25 votes. You can kill a bill on General File with fewer than 25 votes. A majority of those voting can kill a bill. There could arise a situation where more than 25 but fewer than 30 members do feel that a mistake was made in killing a bill. Whether it was done in committee, I think it takes 30 to raise it from committee if it was killed anyway, so that wouldn't really apply here. Although they might have that feeling, they wouldn't have the votes. But a bill killed by 25 votes on the floor of the Legislature, it may be felt that an amending process would be the quickest way to get this situation taken care of rather than resurrect the bill at the stage of consideration where it was killed and start moving it through the process again. Let me ask Senator Wickersham this question. Senator Wickersham, if a bill is bogged down on General File...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...and it fails to move, it wouldn't take 30 votes to add that bill to a bill by way of an amendment, would it?

SENATOR CROSBY: Senator Wickersham.

SENATOR WICKERSHAM: No.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: If it got 1 vote in favor and 20 votes against, the answer's the same, right? You could add that bill to another bill if it's germane with 25 votes.

SENATOR WICKERSHAM: Until it's been voted on three times on General File or twice on Select File.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, no, you don't have to do that. You can just take it, you can make it into an amendment and add it to another bill if it hasn't been killed.

SENATOR WICKERSHAM: Once it's been voted on for the requisite number of times, it's deemed to be indefinitely postponed.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's not what I'm talking about. I'm talking about for the purposes of your amendment. A bill has not been killed but it has failed to advance twice. That bill, by the amending process, can be added to another bill by 25
