SENATOR COORDSEN: Senator Jensen, did you wish a minute and 20 seconds?

SENATOR JENSEN: (Microphone not activated immediately.) ...to Senator Brown.

SENATOR COORDSEN: Senator Brown. This is kind of like musical chairs, Senator Brown.

SENATOR BROWN: (Microphone not activated, remark inaudible.)

SENATOR COORDSEN: There's one minute, one minute left.

SENATOR HARTNETT: (Microphone not activated immediately.) ...impact aid because Senator Wickersham, I think, was talking about the money and my neighbor here, too. But we get...about a third of our district is off the tax rolls. So if we could get it back on, I think we would give the 9 million...because it would raise much more in property tax with that. So rather than get hit with a double whammy by, you know, losing money off the rolls, the $9 million kind of makes up for it. So, thank you. Maybe they're back now where somebody can talk, make an intelligence sense now.

SENATOR COORDSEN: Thank you, Senator Hartnett. Senator Robinson.

SENATOR ROBINSON: Mr. President, members of the body, nice to be back here. Is Senator Bohlke around?

SENATOR COORDSEN: Senator Bohlke, I do not see Senator Bohlke. Senator Bohlke is here, she's going to her microphone. Would you respond to a question, please?

SENATOR ROBINSON: Ardyce, did you hear that?

SENATOR BOHLKE: I sure did, Bud. (Laughter)

SENATOR ROBINSON: Senator Ardyce, that's how you spell it. Had it all my life and I like it. When will we have a printout?

SENATOR BOHLKE: The letter has gone to the Department of Ed asking, however Senator Wickersham and Senator Robak are ahead
