look at a superintendent of schools, you have a school that has a school board, you have a county...you have a superintendent of schools who is a hired superintendent who is paid to do a certain job, and you have principals in all your schools. You know, you don't elect all...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...your principals.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Would a county attorney be one that would be appointed or elected? Because the county attorney exercises great discretion in who to charge, in what laws to enforce and not enforce, obviously, they don't work under the direction of a policy directed by the county board. And the reason I'm asking is not, not for any reason whether to vote for or against the bill (sic). but I want to flesh out what the constitutional wording means because if this would pass at some point in time people are going to look to this and try to define what those words may mean and we need to have talked about it. Is a county attorney one that you would envision being administrative in nature or being a policymaker?

SENATOR HILLMAN: I envision them to be administrative in nature. But what I envision the statute to look like is that the county would come up with a plan, an organizational plan that they think would fit their needs in that county. And I'm suggesting that you probably could have a mix, which means the county...

SENATOR CROSBY: Time.

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...administrator might not be over all of them.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Kristensen. Senator Hillman, your light is next.

SENATOR HILLMAN: I appreciate the questions that are coming out in the discussion on this because it is no small move and I do not take it lightly. Believe me, I do not. And I know that there are a lot of questions as to how it will be carried out. And the next really important step is going to be by this body after, if it is approved, to say how we want it to work. But
