

people but as objects, as problems, as diseased things. They even interfered with the functioning of the Lancaster County Juvenile Court. After a mandate came from the appellate court, they got this simpleminded judge to say, well, we're going to do some more work on this, ignoring the appellate court, and it caused great agony to the family because they believed that the court system prevails in this society, and if an upper court tells a flunky court to do something, the flunky is supposed to do it, but this woman said, the hell with the appellate court. I've got Don Leuenberger and the Schutzstaffel on my side, and they said, by God, we're going to ignore this and do it a different way. Fortunately, a lawyer took it to the State Supreme Court, and you know the story of "The Billy Goat's Gruff". There was a troll under the bridge, and the little Billy Goat Gruff went tripping over the bridge and the troll said, who's that walking on my bridge? And the little goat said, it is I, the little Billy Goat Gruff. The troll said, I'm going to come eat you up. And the little goat said, don't eat me, wait till my bigger brother comes. You know, sacrificing somebody for the good of the cause. The greatest good for the greatest number and the greatest number is number one. So he was passing the buck, and it went that way through several.

SENATOR COORDSEN: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So suddenly there came this thunderous sound on the bridge, and the troll said, who is that walking on my bridge? And he said, it is I, the big Billy Goat Gruff, and the troll said, I'm going to come and eat you up. And the big Billy Goat Gruff said, come on, let's have at it, and when the troll came up, the big Billy Goat Gruff ran him through and sent him to wherever trolls go, when they meet an unkind fate. So the court, the Supreme Court was like the big Billy Goat Gruff and he told the troll you'd better do what you were told to do or come and tell the big boys why. You're not dealing now with an AIDS-afflicted mother. You're not dealing with a little child. You're dealing with the big boys. Now do it or tell us why you won't, and shaking like a leaf on a tree, she said, I think I'd better do it, and Leuenberger was right in the middle of it all. I know...

SENATOR COORDSEN: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...my time is up this time but I put my light
