

type of computers we have in the state? Senator Withem admits that he knows probably a little more than I do. I learned how to turn on a computer, then I turned onto the Internet, so I know more than Senator Brashear, because he didn't know anything about them. But, let's see, is there anyone in here that knows anything about the type of computers...

SENATOR WILL: Would anyone like to yield to Senator Robinson?

SENATOR ROBINSON: No one knows. No one knows. Senator Bernard-Stevens. Come on. Come on. Get up.

SENATOR WILL: Senator Bernard-Stevens, would you yield?

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: Hesitantly.

SENATOR ROBINSON: How old...how old a system do we have to your knowledge?

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: I think this is one where I could make up a number and I don't think you'd be able to argue with me, but I am not going to do that at this point. I don't know. But I know Larry Primeau, the head of...the leviathan on DAS, is in the back and I know that he would have that answer for you.

SENATOR ROBINSON: Senator Lindsay says the late seventies. I told someone I'd probably vote for this bill, and I probably will, but the more I hear about it, I think Senator Wickersham and Senator Withem and, who else was...Senator Lindsay, I think maybe we should take a look at it. I don't know how much it would cost to find out how much a new system, whether we need one or not, instead of pouring in $30 million. I know my time is getting short and I appreciated the 309 Committee. You know, Senator Wehrbein, I will give you this time for two buckets of plaster. My wall, the plaster has completely fallen off, I am serious, and I can't get anything out of Lynch over here because he holds all the money, but I'll even...I'll get Jansen to help me to troll (sic) it on. But, you know, we can't even plaster our darn walls around here. It is pathetic. I tell them it is a French painting when they come in there. Senator Schimek knows what I am talking about. Senator Wehrbein, you can have the rest.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I will do my best, Senator Robinson.
