originally to have a broader application in case we wanted to get into information technology advances, which is what some of you are talking about. At this point, I think we consider the 29 to 30 fairly accurate until we go for RFPs and know what that's all about because we were really concerned it might have expanded to 36 million. And it is also the scope of the issue, we think we have it scoped out fairly well, but we are not sure, and as to the three year commitment, I think that may be somewhat negotiable. On the other hand, if we make this commitment, we need to have an idea where the money is coming if we divert it.
