

on you, God drops the hammer on you. I control God, too, because God doesn't know what to do to you until I tell Him what to do, and by God, I say that if you don't get out of the Daughters of Job, you're out of here. Get out of Planned Parenthood or you're out of here. Get out of the Hemlock Society, you're out of here. I'll bet he doesn't know the first thing about any of those organizations. But that's what happens when you get people who have mental deficiencies and put them in positions where they control others' lives and it touches on what I'm talking about with reference to these teachers. Some of them are the ones least qualified to be in the classroom because they are out of touch with the youngsters and their needs. So it would be like a person coming to a doctor needing an antibiotic, and the doctor administers castor oil. Well, there will certainly be a result from the castor oil, but it's not the result that's needed, and it certainly is not going to cure the ailment that the person comes to the doctor for. So what I am talking about here...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...is the pointlessness of what Senator Brown's amendment accomplished, and what the amendment of Senator Lindsay will accomplish. First of all, both of them are written in the kind of language that invites ignoring. They don't have to do anything. Senator Brown even acknowledged that the word "consider" is not mandatory of anything. You can just put it on a piece of paper and wave it in the room, and that's all the consideration you intend to give it, but you considered it. And they can do as I'm saying, they can cut academic programs first. Where is Senator Lindsay? If he's here, I want to ask him a question.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Lindsay.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, he can't get here in the... How much time do I have, Madam President?

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Four seconds.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: He can't run that fast. Thank you.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Bernard-Stevens.
