

here, but I'd just like to know exactly what that means, after the "until".

SENATOR WICKERSHAM: That's certainly the way I interpret it, and that's the way I understand the supporters interpret it.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I was on something else, so...

SENATOR CUDABACK: I'd like to ask Senator Wehrbein a question also.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Yes.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Senator Wehrbein, beings you're kind of in charge of the money here and so on and the pursestrings, your interpretation of where...of where...after you appropriate the money...

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Yes.

SENATOR CUDABACK: ...you give it to whoever is in charge of the money then. Do they have absolute, 100 percent control of those dollars, or do they have to ask anybody else? Is there just the agency...

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: No, once it's appropriated to a given line-item or a given agency, or in this case they are in charge of that through...to spend that amount of money as they...within statute...

SENATOR WILL: One minute.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: ...and statute.

SENATOR CUDABACK: I guess it worries me here where we're headed here. Are we going to start micromanaging every, you know, it kind of worries me. Are we going to set up another board between us and the agency? Maybe it needs to be, maybe we should, but it kind of worries me here that this body is going to start, like Senator Withem said, start micromanaging everything that we do appropriate for. I guess it kind of, you know, bothers me in a sense. I didn't know if there was an in between, if there's anything in the regs that says...
