how a judge is to be dealt with, to avoid even the appearance of a lack of impartiality. Now, the duties of these judges are crucial. Judges do things and deal with issues that no other branch of government does. When we get to another bill, I want to talk just a little bit about the significance of the work of the county court judges. And, brothers and sisters, we've got some people in the county court system as judges who, if they wore those wigs, could shake their head, the wig would not fall off. They could stand in a hurricane and the wig would not fall off. And do you know why the wig would not fall off? Because they are nailed onto the judge's head. That's how incompetent some of those people are. But once again we cannot look at the abhorration and use that as the standard by which we judge everybody and reduce the entire system to the low level that we're trying to eradicate. That is not the case with the Supreme Court. The other judges salaries are t'ad into the amount received by the Supreme Court. We should not withhold what is offered by this bill. Senator Brashear said he did not want to talk the bill to death, nor do I. But some of my colleagues have asked me questions, and I want to answer some of those questions on the record, and that's why I've addressed some of these things in the way that I have. The judges of the Supreme Court do work. They don't take long times off, like the U.S. Supreme Court will do. And they are not in a situation where they're sitting around, twiddling their thumbs, or plucking lint off their robes, or whatever else they might do if they didn't have anything to do. If I did not believe that this increase were justified, I certainly would not support it. I am not personal friends with any judge on the court. In fact, I'm probably not personal friends with as many people as it would take to be designated by the fingers on my hand if every finger on my hand were cut off, which means that I'm in one of those positions, Senator Bourne, where I'm a loner, but I'm not lonely. (Laugh.) Excuse me a minute. How much time do I have, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: You have one minute and ten seconds.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, I will give this time back, because I think that I've completed the thought that I wanted. But I'm making a plea that we do advance this bill. And, as...
