and Senator Brashear, I observed him one morning waving at me and talking with the other hand. I never could figure out how he was driving. (Laughter.) I just never can let you forget that, Senator Brashear, because it was on the parking lot and he knew he was in trouble the minute he saw me. But when you run bills like the cell phone, what you get is we're taking away a person's right to use that telephone, whether it is safe or not. So the seat belt thing, I don't know how you're going to watch, and so I would like to hear somebody speak about that, Senator Byars, if you have some information as how the other states know or can observe so quickly when a car goes by whether or not the driver is wearing a seat belt. I have some of the same feelings that Senator Chambers and Senator Schmitt have about the whole idea of trying to ticket people for something that is very difficult to tell whether or not they are actually doing it, or...and not wearing the seat belt or wearing the seat belt or...one of the things I guess I would worry more about than the driver not wearing a seat belt is having a child properly restrained. And I think we took care of that along the way someplace several years ago. So, Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have?

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: You have approximately a minute.

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Excuse me, you've got approximately two minutes.

SENATOR CROSBY: Two minutes, okay, thank you. Senator Chambers, if you need that two minutes, you may have it.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Crosby, I really appreciate this, and maybe I can get enough time but I have several motions because this is one of those matters where I am going to have to use it as an opportunity to try to help educate my colleagues, so that on other issues when they come up related to racial matters, you might have a groundwork of information that will at least give you an understanding of why I speak as I do. Senator Bromm, his statements were a little off-putting to me this morning. When
