you to think about who is driving the team here. There was a bill last week, I didn't vote on the bill itself, I voted against the A bill. It was $2.773 million left over from the mitigation bill of last year, which I voted against, but they don't want that money to go anywhere so we're going to establish a fund, totally unneeded, to handle little shortfalls here, little mistakes there, gloss things over, and then they got I think three years to pay it back. That is not the way that you promote efficiency. That is not the way you contain costs. The first thing you do to contain a cost is you learn how to say, well, this is a secret word but I'll tell you, no. Just learn how to say no. It's very, very simple. In business you do it a lot. Evidently, if you're an educationalist instead of someone who's in business, you don't ever have to say it. Please vote to override the veto, but stop and think. We've got to change the formula and I don't think that we've got an awful lot of time to do it. I think Senator Baker's right. And I think Senator Chambers is right, for once. No.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR TYSON: He was right, I forget the year, but he was right once before. But we are going to have a reaction from the people that sent us down here. Enough people voted on 413 just a few months ago to indicate that maybe not is all peaches and cream out there in voter land. Please vote for the override but think we're going to have to do something about how this thing...how these numbers are generated or we're going to have more problems than we really want to handle. Thank you.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Thank you, Senator Tyson. Senator Redfield.

SENATOR REDFIELD: Thank you, Mr. Lieutenant Governor, members of the body. I want to thank Senator Crosby for her reminder of a history lesson today because those who don't learn from history are destined to repeat it. And I think there are a lot of historical events that have occurred that we need to be reminded of, and one is the fact that this is not a new issue, it is not a partisan issue. Governor Ben Nelson, last spring, vetoed a measure that was very similar to this, and this body came into a special session just because of an issue like this.
