SENATOR KIEL: ...public safety ideology. And I want to close with something that I've been talking about all along, and that is the message that we send to young people. In the wake of the March 1998 schoolyard ambush of children by children in Jonesboro, Arkansas, Lott voices strong support for arming teachers and other school personnel against gun-toting juveniles. Allowing teachers and other law-abiding adults to carry concealed weapons in schools would not only make it easier to stop shootings in progress but could help deter student shootings from ever occurring. I will tell you very, very strongly that arming teachers so that we can make our classrooms a shootout at the OK Corral is about the worst scenario that I can think of. Thank you.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Thank you, Senator. Further discussion on the Chambers amendment, Senator Bohlke.

SENATOR BOHLKE: Yes, Mr. President and members, if Senator Janssen would answer a question please, or two.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Senator Janssen.

SENATOR JANSSEN: I'll certainly try, Senator Bohlke.

SENATOR BOHLKE: And you may...you may not be able to, but you know last week we were discussing that many of the arguments for the bill happen to be for protecting women and I did the little demonstration with Senator Chambers about getting a gun out of a purse. But, as I understand, there are designer purses made for handling a concealed weapon.

SENATOR JANSSEN: I didn't know that.

SENATOR BOHLKE: Well, then you probably aren't going to know the price.

SENATOR JANSSEN: Oh, I have...I have no idea what women's price...pocketbooks cost. I don't even know what a wallet cost for myself. I usually get one for Christmas.

SENATOR BOHLKE: Well, I would assume if, from the material I've
