that, and it goes back a number of years that as many members of the body have had to serve, served for a number of years on the board of directors and later as the president of the board of one of the larger agriculture supply co-ops in our area. So I've seen this issue from the other side, particularly during the transition time between local lien filings and the centralized filing system, which was, I will tell you, a tremendous, tremendous improvement in...in being able to even identify what your position was, if you were a supplier in agriculture, primarily fuel and fertilizer, although there are other things. This amendment, the changes are on the machine. They are on the back of...toward the back of the bill. By the way, the bill, in case you don't know, is 280 pages I think, and I was under the impression that it was a recodification but it is a little bit higher...higher standard than that in that there are some changes made. And if I say something that is not accurate, I know that my friend Senator Landis will most certainly make sure that what I say is accurate. But it is my understanding, and what I'm speaking to is the unique lien, the agricultural lien that Senator Landis mentioned as being somewhat peculiar to Nebraska and a number of other states in which agriculture is one of the larger users of credit. The amendment, and it's three sections, just relate to ensuring two things that wherever a lien is mentioned in those sections that, for an example, it adds in a section that has to do with growing timber, crops growing or to be grown or timber to be harvested at a later time, I think is what it is, and then it inserts, except for financing statements covering crop growing or to be grown or timber to be cut, which is...puts into statute that language with respect to agricultural liens. And then where the disagreement is, it adds a small section that provides that a description of the land to which the lien is ascribed must be included in the lien...lien filing, which means that the banks are typically the first in line, first in place lender, and currently they have to make sure that they have the...the legal descriptions of the land that is being controlled by their loan customer. And, apparently, at some times that must provide some difficulties and so they were successful in having the language removed from the Uniform Commercial Code that required a lien filing in an agricultural lien situation to include the description of the land concerned. Well, from a standpoint of the bank, that's probably all right, but the other people that
