SENATOR CHAMBERS: How many citizens do you think know how many points are assessed for exceeding the speed limit by a given number of miles per hour?

SENATOR BROMM: Probably just most of those who have problems with their points.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And they made...right, and the only way they'd know is that points were actually assessed.

SENATOR BROMM: That's right.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, and the point I'm making here is that we put things in the law and we discuss it, but we don't even remember all of those things, and you're not expected to. But the citizens are to have notice but, realistically speaking, when we put it in the statute book, that constitutes notice, even if they never read the statute, even if they can't read, if they have no access. And the courts have said time and time again, ignorance of the law is no excuse. It is a plea that every person will make and one that is impossible to disprove. That's why they don't allow you to plead ignorance of the law, unless you're a lawyer or a judge. Then ignorance of the law is an excuse. You can say, Judge, I was not trained in that area of the law, and the Judge says, then you cannot be held accountable for...

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...what you didn't know. In this that we're talking about, though, I don't really believe it's necessary, and I also don't think we ought to burden down Senator Bromm's bill, so we ought to rescue him. And that drunk bill, if you all want the drunk bill, then you ought to defeat this amendment, and then get all that federal money. In the same way that I had to overlook some grammatical errors in that tobacco money recovery bill, you all just let this thing go by the boards we have here before us now because it was not even in Senator Bromm's original plan.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Debate on Senator Chambers' amendment?
