moratorium, I would have opposed it, but he, I, and Senator Brashear have had a little conference. And since additional resources are going to be made available to be sure that we get an in-depth, quality, meaningful study, taking a year off the moratorium is of no consequence to me. I want the study. I want it to have the quality that it merits. And because additional staffing provisions will be made, I have no objection whatsoever to Senator Bromm's amendment. As a matter of fact, the sooner the evidence is in, the sooner we can arrive at a conclusion. I have been studying cases in Nebraska, not from the standpoint of a statistical analysis, I have read cases. I have in my files actual death penalty documents from filings by lawyers to death warrants and other material that I had to get from the Historical Society. I'm aware of the two young guys who were executed around Christmas time, one right after the other, Cole and Grammer, and some of the other cases that are of more recent vintage. And I'm convinced that, if the members of the Legislature will review the type of report that I expect will be generated, the Legislature will not be comfortable with the type of system that exists. I'm going to support Senator Bromm's amendment. And we have also agreed, the three of us, Senator Bromm, Senator Brashear and myself, to do work between now and Select File to put some additional language in this bill to give further direction and guidance in terms of what we're looking for, because if you all would excuse me from the Legislature for a week, which you might be willing to do, but which I would not accept, I could prepare statistics on cases that have come down in Nebraska. So I think it's clear from the record, even in the short time we've discussed Senator Bromm's amendment, that the language currently in the statute or in the committee amendment, which will become the bill, we are going...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...to work that language over and present something which will make it clear what it is the Legislature intends to have done. Although I am trying to have the death penalty abolished, although I'm hoping that this report will be a step in that direction, I would be foolish to say that this bill, when it is enacted into law, is going to result in the death penalty being abolished. It's not. Even if it came back, the report, that every allegation that has ever been made
