amendment to Senator Wehrbein's, then the amended Wehrbein amendment will be adopted and the bill will move on and there will be joy throughout the land and we'll live happily ever after until January 1st of next session. What I want to point out now, since this bill is a stopgap, I want to let Senator Raikes know that I'm well-aware that no state Legislature can solve the problems of production agriculture. And I also will say this. Because of the fact that Nebraska and every other agricultural state is facing a global economy, a point is going to be reached where even the U.S. government is not going to be definitive in terms of determining markets. Markets are going to have to be looked at in a global context. Other countries are producing the same products that are produced in Nebraska. Other countries have different economic systems from that of Nebraska. And many of those people who are in agriculture obviously are in rural areas. They're the same ones who speak against governmental intrusion and interference, except when the government is going to guarantee them a living. Now when I come in here, and others who represent people in the city who have nothing to sell but their labor, and we want an increase in the minimum wage, our rural brothers and sisters say, no, no, no, no, no, and the "Repelican" party says the same thing. But then, when the big companies whom the "Repelican" party loves, will come to a state and say, tailor a law to give us corporate welfare, they can always find plenty of people to do that. And when others will say, give us in agriculture welfare, we don't want to call it that, but that's what it is, we find plenty of people to do that. What has to be done in this society, and it's never going to be done, is to recognize that government is able to help those who cannot help themselves and it should do so, but not on the basis of these in agriculture and those in corporations. You know why the government might help agriculture? They don't care about these little people who have these family farms. Those people are in holding actions right now. The family farm, unless it's one of these huge things, the family farm never was a viable economic unit and it never will be. It cannot be. You have to operate on such a large scale now that families cannot even get in the race. But they let them sit in the stands and give them the impression that there's a part they're playing. But every farm in this state is being eyed greedily by some large amorphous entity which ultimately is going to gobble it up, and we can say that we wish that were not
