of time on this discussion, but yet I think it is a very important discussion and there are some honest differences of opinion here, so I hope that you will...will be tolerant of the discussion. I also want to say that some of us did swallow hard to take this particular language in this particular amendment, because it says, one, there shall be no moratorium, and some of us who happen to think that local control is a good thing happen to think that if a county wants to place a moratorium that's their business, it's not up to us to tell them. But that's neither here nor there. We also put some regulations in about how far away these feedlots could be from a residence or from a community, and my personal preference is that that would be a longer distance. But I was told that, by and large, the half mile and the mile are pretty much standard operating procedure. The part about the geographically close counties, I'm not sure I see a real need for that except that it was something that would bring people on board. It meant that a county in the Sandhills, for instance, can't go over to southeast Nebraska, where they have more stringent zoning, and adopt their zoning provisions. So, I mean, there were...there was a lot of give and take in this whole discussion and I think it's very important that...I hope that you heard what Senator Matzke said, that we're talking about some of the most pristine areas of this state and they haven't started their zoning yet. And, you know, I could say to you, well, gee whiz, Lancaster County did their zoning 30-40 years ago, I'm not sure when. Why should we let anybody do their zoning now? Why should we let anybody have interim zoning? It's their problem. It's their fault. Well, it is their problem and it is their fault, but they have the problems and it seems to me that we should help them try to solve them. I don't really sense that extending this date to June of next year is going to do anybody any harm. And it is going to allow us to be in session and come back and, if there are any problems that need to be addressed, we can address it. Otherwise, we risk, what Senator Raikes said a little while ago, we risk having some of those counties come back in next year and want a new zoning bill. And it just seems to me if it's good public policy for now for letting some of the camels' noses under the tent then it's good policy for next June 1 to let some more camels' noses under the tent. I want all these counties to get zoned, for heaven sakes. It's important. It helps promote orderly growth. It helps preserve our environment. There are a
