line 8, which is Section 3, subsection (1), it's the definition section. Attributable revenue means state tax revenue...state tax revenue generated due to the construction of the eligible facility, employment at the eligible facility, and spending by participants, increased by the applicable investment multiplier. The multiplier applies to all three. There are different multipliers according to economic...econometric models for construction than for retail, for example, and to the extent...to the extent that those are different functions, there would probably be a different multiplier applied. So the answer is the multiplier does apply to construction. Why? Because this is a building being built for which there would not otherwise be this construction work, not for this action. It is a new economic activity. It is lifting all boats, if you will, in the sense that there will be a growth of economic activity. It's new...new construction and, therefore, a new revenue source for the state. If you wanted to go to the next spot, you would take a look at Section 6, no, Section 7, so it's page 6, line 11. There's an application and evidence given and then the board shall make a finding whether the convention center and meeting facility described is eligible for state assistance. So, first, there's the definition. Secondly, there has to be a finding of eligibility. Then take a look on the same page down to line 24, after there is a finding of eligibility, the board shall, on the basis of the application and the evidence, make an estimate as to the amount of attributable revenue. So, first, there is the projects and the application, the evidence. Secondly, there is a finding of eligibility. Third, there is an estimate of the amount of attributable revenue, and if you take a look at page 7, it says, investment multipliers used by the board shall not exceed two. Why? Because there is a multiplier in any one of those three circumstances. So application, evidence, finding, now estimate. Then take a look at line 7 of page 7. If the application is approved, there's been a finding, there's been an estimate, there's been an approval, then there is an audit and the audit is of the conventions, it determines the number of participants, and in that way it makes sure that the...what has been expected in the estimate situation has actually come true, in which case then we'd know that. And after you audit, you then determine, and this is in line 13 of page 7, determine the amount of attributable revenue with regard to construction, number one, employment, number two, and
