to sell liquor for 48-hours and don't do anything except fine them up until that point. That is why you need discretion and significant penalties. When these kinds of things happen, you need to be able to come down harder than simply fining somebody and letting them buy themselves out of the case, which is what happens now. There are occasions as simple as the compliance check problem, overwhelming the store, an ill-trained clerk. However, I got to tell you right now, the law says that clerk's on for a 1,000 dollar penalty, not the store, the clerk. The clerk has the 1,000 dollar penalty. The kid has a 500 dollar penalty, and the kid also has a 30-day jail sentence staring him in the face, and the merchant, who is profiting from the exchange, buys off the offense with the Liquor Control Commission. The clerk pays $1,000, the kid pays $500, goes to jail, the retailer buys off the fine with the Liquor Control Commission.

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR LANDIS: That's where we are now. I don't think that situation is fair. I think there's plenty of deterrent there. It seems to me legitimate to have the discretionary tool for repeat offenders consistent with what our expert front-line defense of the people who are supposed to administer these kinds of licenses tells us they need in the fight against teen drinking. That's the least we can do. I ask you to vote against the Brashear amendment.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Landis. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President, members of the Legislature, I wasn't on the floor while the maneuvering was going on that put the bill in its present form but I was watching it. There has been so much compromising on this bill now that I don't see it as being a principled bill at all. Everybody is getting something, so maybe to the shock and amazement of Senator Brashear I'm going to support his amendment. Let the liquor industry have what they want on this one, as they were given what they wanted on the books, and as Creighton and other private schools were given on the right to have a license to sell liquor. It used to be that when these issues came up, people talked about principle. Well, the only principle involved now
