say, Senator Bourne, I'm going to Lincoln, I'll take you. He says, I'm not going to drop my can; I got to keep my can, so either you're going to take me and my can, or you're going to leave me on this highway. And, if I leave him on the highway, he'll stagger out there and get run over by a truck. Now maybe, if that was "Baron" Tyson, we'd have a different set of circumstances, but I'm putting together this example. So I, who have never tasted alcohol, pick Senator Bourne up, and we get stopped. I am in violation of the law. A man is in my car who has an open container, and it doesn't have to have much alcohol in it, more than a trace amount and the crime is committed. But, if I'm driving a limousine or a taxi cab or a jitney and I pick Senator Bourne up, I can give him liquor, I can make the providing of liquor one of the inducements for people to ride in my vehicle. There is no reason, especially when we're talking about commercial conveyances, to put on the streets, the highways and in public parking places people who can drink.

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So, here we are, sitting in my stretch limo, and nobody can have an open container. Right next to us is "Smitty" Smith's stretch limo, but they paid him to sit in his limo, and that's all, and they can all drink. That is what is irrational. When Senator Tyson said he wanted to introduce some rationality into the discussion, right after making that statement he should have sat down and spoken not another word. (Laugh)

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Schmitt, on the Tyson amendment.

SENATOR SCHMITT: Yes, Mr. President, members. Again, I'm going to stand to oppose the Tyson amendment. And, as I stated before, it is pretty hard to enforce drinking on a public highway. You have to see the person actually take the drink. The way it is right now, I could open a can of beer, bottle of alcoholic beverage of any kind, I can drive down any public road in this state with it sitting between my legs, on my lap, I can have it in my hand, it is not enforceable the way it is. But with the open container then it would be, even with the driver. Like I said before, if the driver is drinking, the way it is now
