LB 382

Senator Lynch and it didn't seem to bother him at that time. If you paid attention to what happened in Omaha, they had a special election for a quarter of a billion dollar bond issue, which by the way since it passed and fewer than 25,000 voters obliged all of the taxpayers in Omaha and parts of Sarpy County to up the money to retire those bonds, a program like this one envisioned in 382 may not have the best of chances if I would say 35 percent of those voting, meaning that 65 percent could vote no, and if 35 percent voted yes, then it would still go. But it's one of those situations where when the state is going to be implicated, it automatically becomes different from an ordinary bond issue, from an ordinary financing arrangement. Now understand this, if the bond issue is floated, then we're talking about trying to get the state into this and it must be a general obligations bond issue. A general obligation bond is guaranteed by all of the sources from revenue...from all the sources from which the political entity can derive revenues. They can have the wheel tax, the sales tax, property tax for sure, and any other fees and whatever else they have by which they draw money into the public till, and the vast majority of that money is going to come from the taxpayers...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...of Omaha. Even if a point is reached where you have a qualifying event, and let's say Omaha gets the entire $75 million, there still would be $235 million...$135 million that the taxpayers are going to have to pay. And, remember, it's not like the Legislature is going to dribble this money out over a 30-year period. That's how long the bonds can be for. If the thing is built and they have obligated themselves, Omaha has, for a certain amount and they can show that it's going to generate so much and so much revenue, then maybe that $75 million would come in three years, maybe two years if they're real good. But after the $75 million dollar cap is reached, any other money that comes in...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...is gravy for others. Omaha would get none of that.
