remember the terms. (Laugh) But I would accept the amendment, and it may prove that Gene Tyson is the biggest winner of the day, that's possible.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Thank you, Senator Landis. Senator Tyson, your light is next.

SENATOR TYSON: I want to correct Senator Landis. If this thing goes forward, I don't know who the winner is. I know who the losers are, the people of Omaha, who, this year, are contributing not quite $5.2 million in subsidies, including 2.563 to Rosenblatt Stadium, home of the World Series (sic), where I don't know how many hundreds of millions of dollars would have to be spent at the World Series to return that much money to the city sales tax. That's beside the point. I have been watching carefully, I've been analyzing. In less than two months, Senator Chambers is turning 62, I knew he was weakening, I could see the slump in his shoulders, the grey in his hair. I hated to take advantage of an aging, pathetic figure, but money is money, "aerarium non olet", the Romans said, gold doesn't stink. And I...I will find a good use for the $20. Thank you very much.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Thank you, Senator Tyson. Senator Lynch, your light is next.

SENATOR LYNCH: Just for the record, Madam Chairman and members, and so that you all know, I bet Tyson $40 it wouldn't take eight hours. (Laughter)

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Thank you, Senator Lynch. Senator Landis, you're next.

SENATOR LANDIS: I just want to say that after the Tyson speech, the stakeholders actually decided that this has to be forfeited to the schools, as all penalties are, (laughter) and, of course, that would be consistent with Senator Chambers' concern that all forfeitures and confiscated goods go to the schools, and that Marion Price is the closest thing we have to a school board here, and I'm going to have to turn this over to her, because she'll be our spokesperson on behalf of the schools.
