stream and going to go wherever it takes him because it'll probably end or he'll get close enough to land to moor his little canoe. But before he gets there what happens? They start from the bank, throwing all kind of stuff into the canoe and now that which started out as a canoe is unrecognizable because it's covered with so much material that you can't determine exactly what it is underneath it all. So if Senator Hilgert is willing to let his little watercraft be sunk, he's certainly going about it in the right way. Now the Titanic hit an iceberg. The Bismarck was sunk with...was it sunk with a torpedo? I could ask Senator...I'd like to ask "Baron" Tyson a question. Mr...I'd like to ask "Baron" Tyson a question.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator Tyson, would you respond?

SENATOR TYSON: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: "Baron" Tyson, I know some people who think of a Bismarck as a jelly doughnut may sink that doughnut in coffee, but how was the ship known as the Bismarck sunk, if it was?

SENATOR TYSON: It was crippled by torpedoes and eventually it was sunk by torpedoes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you.

SENATOR TYSON: You're welcome.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Now, Senator Tyson, do you think anything short of a torpedo or a bomb or some kind of missile could have sunk the Bismarck? Do you think small arms fire could have sunk it?

SENATOR TYSON: No.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you think heavy machine gun fire?

SENATOR TYSON: No.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you.
