friend Sheriff Schmitt, who is leaving us, and I wish he would stay, but if wishes were horses then beggars would ride, as people say. Nevertheless, these carrier enforcement officers would remain carrier enforcement officers if there had not been the attempt to convert them...the attempt to convert them into quasi state troopers. When they got the guns, which I was opposed to, and I should have fought that tooth and nail, as I do things today, but the argument was made then they need training in the handling of these side arms. Since they need that training, they may as well get it the same place as state troopers get their training, and while there they may as well take the same training, even though they are not state troopers and they do not have law enforcement powers. Many people don't know that. They didn't know it, and they tried to exercise those powers and the Nebraska Supreme Court said, oh, no, buddy, hold on, sit back, be cool, settle down, and do what you are supposed to do, which is to be a carrier enforcement officer. So what some of the troopers are trying to do to swell their ranks is to get law enforcement duties and powers bestowed on these carrier enforcement officers, thereby erasing any distinction between the two. And if there is no distinction between two items, you don't have two items, you have only one. And to get philosophical, three-God people, like all you Christians, are in trouble because God is supposed to be infinite. God is not limited to any space. But you can only have one item occupying, whether you call it space, position, or whatever. So if you have a God which is all powerful, infinite and unlimited, that God occupies the entire territory, and you cannot have other gods involved, so there cannot be three gods. And despite the fact that a guy said in his song, the three men that I admire the most, the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost all caught the last train for the coast the day the music died. There cannot be three gods. But that is a long way around to make my point. You've got somebody over here called a carrier enforcement officer. That one is trained in the same way as this one called a state trooper. The one called the carrier enforcement officer does not have law enforcement powers. That distinguishes him or her from the state trooper. The carrier enforcement officer does not make the same money, so you have two distinct categories. So you begin to try to remove the distinctions. You try to give them the law enforcement powers. That draws them closer. You say, pay them the same amount of
