even. Would you agree with that, that there are people who...more people coming to that conclusion, not necessarily that you think that's the best situation?

SENATOR BRASHEAR: I understand. I was only playing with the word "more". I...I'm not going to say more have decided not to, but it appears over time that more people have chosen that course.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. So, we are going into two areas, one that involves married people and another where it involves unmarried people. Now we can find, with certitude, the number of people who got married in this state, although those who are married may have come here, so we don't know how many are actually married. But we can find out how many got married, can't we,...

SENATOR BRASHEAR: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...by just going to the records?

SENATOR BRASHEAR: Yes, we can.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do we have any way of determining how many unmarried couples there are in the state...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...who have a child?

SENATOR BRASHEAR: In the day and age of quick access to accumulated information, it might be possible to determine it, based on birth certificates.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But we won't always have stated on the birth certificate the name of the father. Would you agree with that?

SENATOR BRASHEAR: You will not always have that, correct.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And even though a person's name is not on the birth certificate as the father, the person who purports to be the father can go into court to have his paternity established.
