

TRANSCRIPT PREPARED BY THE CLERK OF THE LEGISLATURE
Transcriber's Office

January 28, 2000 LB 175

Everybody does that when their bill is in serious trouble. But it would help if these lobbyists and others who bring these bills knew that we're not going to tolerate these kind of bills, I don't mean they can't offer it. Yeah, let them offer it. But when I say tolerate, I mean from the standpoint of rewriting and taking all this time on a nothing bill. Do you think what's happening here bothers any lobbyist? Of course not. They're not in here suffering as you all are, in silence or otherwise. They just hope that there is some way that a sliver of opportunity will open and they will get for their client what their client paid them to get. But when the lobbyists collar you all and get to talking to you, then they will make you think that your interests are parallel to theirs, and that what they want is what you ought to want. But if you give them what they want, what big shot affairs are you invited to? You're invited to these cattle feedings, where they bring all of you all there. And they can't invite you to anything without offering you liquor. And they bring all of you, because you're of a same of one class or cast. If they happen to sprinkle it with a big shot or two, that's because that big shot wants something. But as I always say, how many of you all have been invited to run for queen of Ak-Sar-Ben? And I always have to say, with all due respect to my sisters in here, you all are too old, you all are too old to be considered queen. Now if you got a granddaughter, she can be, and you all are not insulted by that. These old codgers, these old, lewd, lecherous codgers, acting out every year, this thing of old, lecherous men preying on young women. And the young women's parents don't have any better sense than to be flattered that their daughter is going to sit up there with some old man, older than the momma is, who wouldn't think of having a momma be considered for the queen because she's too old. And you all are not offended at that? Well it's you all's society, and I guess that what you all are conditioned to accept. But just from the standpoint of the way young women and women in general are abused in this society, it's offensive to me, that's why I ridicule it. If I had the time to draw an appropriate picture and write the appropriate rhyme, I could probably run those knights and ladies and whatever else they call those people who put on the funny clothes and have their royal affair, to which none of you all are invited, except as standers along the sideline, they'd cut it out. But when they want something, oh, they'll ply you all with liquor, they'll