feel you all, they'll treat you like you're important, until they get what they need out of you, then they kick you down the stairs. You're not in their social circle. You're just a state senator and you know it. When they have truly social events senators are not invited. When they going to let everybody go out there and tear up the green on a golf course, ain't nobody there but senators and lobbyists. Lobbyists will associate with anybody, just like the mobsters. You know the best show on television I ever saw that had a mobster, it was one where the...it was in Chicago, and there was one of these sell-out Negroes. Negro is a disparaging term, brothers and sisters. There was one of these Negroes who was working with the mob to put pressure...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...on black people who had barber shops, grocery stores, cleaning establishments. Since I can close, I'm going to try to finish it in this one minute, I'm just laying out the background, to show you how we feel about our traitors. And every so often the big shot white guy would pull up in his car and they would invite this Negro in and he'd bring this big old bag full of money and pour it out and tell them how he's really done a good job for the boss. And the boss would sit there and say, ummm, you sure have. And they'd take all that money, the nickels, the dimes, the quarters that were earned at the expenditure of so much effort by these poor black entrepreneurs. I'll finish it on my close.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Thank you. Senator Chambers. You're recognized to close on your bracket.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So one day this Negro brought this big old bag of money and gave it to the white guy, and they were both in the back seat of the car. And the Negro was very proud and pleased, because he was one of those who hated himself, hated black people, and was more for the white man than the white man was for himself. So when he got out of the car, you know what the white boss said to his trigger man, to his goon, to the one carrying the heater? He told this guy, ice him. And the gunman said, ice him? And the white boss said, yeah. And the gunman said, well, why should I? He brings you the money, he does what
