put into the camel's basket was an amount of weight easily borne by the camel and would not even be noticed. Then when we get to the very end, with the person who dropped on the straw, that person says, not only could the camel carry the weight of this straw, but the weight of this straw is less than that of any pebble, so how can I be blamed? And, just before the camel breathes its last, it looks around with those large, soft brown eyes with the long lashes and says, it was work done by all of you, working together in concert that brought me to the point where I am now. Then the poor camel expired and somebody had a fable to tell. So "Senator" Radcliffe is smart enough, through his years of working the Legislature, to put in a pebble at the time. But a point is reached where somebody from the camel humane society or the society for the prevention of cruelty to camels will step on the scene and say, no more pebbles, no more straws, there has to be a halt called right here. And the question might be asked, well what are you going to do about all those pebbles that are already in the basket? Well the first thing we have to do is stop any more from being added, then we will begin the task of removing them. The best way would be to take the whole basket off the camel's back. That will be a comprehensive rewrite of the landlord-tenant law. Maybe some pebbles ought to be carried by the camel, because camels are, in some people's opinion, beasts of burden. So we will begin to examine all of the pebbles that have been put in the basket, and some which appropriately ought to be there will be returned, others will be eliminated. And when we're through the camel will be able to bear its load, and the load being borne will be used for a worthwhile purpose. But in no case will a load so heavy be allowed to be placed on the camel's back that the camel will be crushed under the load. So what I am doing today is taking the camel and placing that camel among the downtrodden who needs protection. And my amendments and my discussion will be designed to stop this bill in its tracks.

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I see Senator Tyson is back. And, if he retakes his seat, then I have something that I'm going to address his way based on some additional research. Now what I want Senator Tyson to be considering is the Oxford Dictionary of the English Language. Does that mean England English, British
