gaming. That's what we're talking about right now, is charitable gaming. If any of you have seen the figures from the Revenue Department what's happened to charitable gaming over the last three to five years, it's on a steady decline. Ladies and gentlemen, it is declining, it is going, going downhill. And where do...where are we getting the funds now to finance the compulsive gambling? We're getting it from these...we're getting it from the lottery, we're getting it from keno, we're getting it from charitable gaming if there's anything left over after administrative costs, which there hardly ever is, but if there is any it goes into the Compulsive Gambling Fund, which I don't...in my opinion, maybe one percent of these problems are coming from charitable gaming. We all know where they're coming from. That's no secret. And we can't build a wall around this state to keep people away from...from higher stake gaming and that's where the problem is coming from. It's not coming from charities. It's not coming from something we're trying to help here right now. Look at what's happened in keno. Keno is going downhill. You all have...you all have these books laying on your table. Look at see what they've done. Do you see gambling interests from out of this state coming in and helping the city or the town of Randolph repair their library, repair their street? No, you don't. You don't see any of that coming there, or Ogallala, or Wahoo, or Lindsay, or Holdrege. You know where that money is coming from. It's coming from keno. Charitable gaming is going to be a thing of the past. American Legions run baseball youth programs throughout this state and I can remember in one particular town in my district where we would have to go out and solicit businesses to help run these baseball programs. When we started with the pickle tickets, the baseball teams were prospering. They still are. They still are in the small towns that have the pickle machines in their establishments. Those kind of programs are funded and they're funded very well. We probably have a better American Legion baseball program now than we've had in years. When I was a lot younger, Senator Chambers and I can go back a long time on this, but when we were younger the American Legion, this was their...this was their big program--American Legion Baseball. And we had winter...or the old, old heavy uniforms and we had them for years and years and our mothers would patch those things up. Now those kids get uniform...new uniforms about every other year. They get new aluminum bats. They're able to finance that, and that money is
