residential, what was commercial and all of the requirements that go along with that. This has not changed one line, one word of the current special land use valuation statutes. It does provide to counties who have elected to make several approaches the opportunity I think, to work toward one single valuation approach that would be useful in all counties that are zoned. We have talked in past legislative sessions a number of times about the need for counties to make these determinations and the reluctance of a few to moving forward into an era where there has been a land use determination made by the county. For those counties that elect to do...do not do that, then the current system that we have in place will in fact be the system, the only system, that will be available to them. Get back to the...where...the comment on what the valuation would be. I think it would be important to remember that, first of all, the rural residential property stays as it is at market value and at 100 percent of market value. All of the vehicles now are assessed at a valuation or have a valuation determined for them that is the same, and the tax, it is the same no matter where that vehicle is located in the state of Nebraska. This makes no change in how we treat farm and commercial personal property that is used in that business. In those counties that are currently not having the outside influence, I suspect that this process will not change the valuation in those counties if we make the assumption that the sales are, in fact, agricultural in nature and will be maintained at that level. So the valuation in the really rural counties...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR COORDSEN: ...probably will not change. It will make a difference, I think, in some counties to a degree, but I would close by saying that the most recent report was that in Douglas County six-tenths of one percent of the valuation was in agricultural property under their greenbelt, and in Lancaster County a little over two percent. So in most of the populous counties it won't make a difference at all. Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Coordsen. You've heard the opening on the committee amendments to LB 1124. Those wishing to speak to the committee amendments are Senator Raikes,
