really known what harm they were doing to anyone aside from their own personal reputations and self-dignity for the spectacle that they presented. I'm afraid that Senator Thompson's bill isn't the answer for those people that I feel sorry for who have been huddled out there, seemingly hooked on doing something that should not be...the huddled masses, yes,...that is not good for them and isn't good for other people if somehow their habit and their use of tobacco causes health problems for others. Just moving people ten feet out isn't going to, in my estimation, make that much difference to those people who have a hypersensitive...a hypersensitivity to smoke and, in fact, it almost brings up to mind something that I remember from reading Hiawatha, or something about an old Indian gauntlet kind of technique where these persons who formerly huddled around the door may huddle on the edges of the sidewalk and you have to run through them to get to the door, and I don't know what kind of an effect that would have. I also am concerned about the notion that Senator Bromm brings up that somehow this applies to more than just state property, this applies to property of all political subdivisions and what the implications are for the decisions that they might make about how to control this kind of a problem in their individual jurisdictions. Seems to me that this is a bit hasty. It also seems to me that the next bill or the next amendment we'll see is that it should be 15 feet, or 20 feet, or 25 feet, or maybe at the bare edges of the government property, and finally, ultimately, that you can't smoke at all on government property. And if we're going to do that my advice to Senator Thompson is just bring that bill that says you can't smoke anywhere on government property. Maybe I'd support that. Maybe that would move those people that I have some compassion for far enough out of sight that even my compassionate eyes would not see them.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Wickersham. Those wishing to speak are Senators Beutler, Jensen, Lynch, Kristensen, Chambers, and Bohlke. Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Cudaback, members of the Legislature, I don't know how fast we want to go on this issue, but we're all going in the same direction and we know it. It's just a question of how fast. And it's just a question of the inequities that are created in a halfway situation. Let me tell
