ever get anything because if they start all over next year, we're going to wind up at this same point again and they're going to throw up their hands and quit. A lot of work has been done on this bill. I don't know what those who are pushing this bill need to get in order to save face or whatever it is that we're trying to work our way around now, but I am not dictated to by big oil, whoever that is, but I will say this. If I am on a sidewalk going a certain direction and the devil gets on one side of me and big oil gets on the other, and some people think the two are the same, but one is on one side and one is on the other, I'm not going to jump off the sidewalk that I was walking on anyway and go a different direction to impress on somebody that I'm not in league with the devil and big oil. No, I was here first. The devil and big oil are in league with me. I don't need big oil to tell me that what is being done here is not good, and you all don't need it either because on other issues, you have said things similar to what I'm saying now, but you've let your greed enter in, the concern about these big corporations who tricked you into thinking that somehow you're helping corn producers, little ones, by putting this ethanol octane thing before us. All it does is befuddle, it confuses and it hides the real issue. Pricing is the issue. Nothing that we've talked about is going to touch that. It shows the impracticality of the farm sector. They cannot face reality so they will reach out and get anything and say anything is better than this, but that's not always the case, because you use up what little...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...good will you might have had, going after something that is not productive of what you need. And you won't listen to anybody. You know so much and you haven't gotten anything and you're not going to get anything now, but you're stubborn and you're bullheaded. So be that way, and I will help you in your stubbornness and your bullheadedness, and we will butt heads and see who falls first. And I shall not fall. I've been in this territory before. I feel good now, like James Brown said, well, I do feel good. This is my territory. I feel right at home. But they still have time to do something if they want to. But if they choose to quit, I'm not in a position to tell them not to.
