using a term from the Bible, my anger was kindled. And you know when I used to hear that as a little boy, the image that came to my mind was somebody with his eyebrows contracted very hard above his nose, eyes bloodshot, his mouth in a snarl with one corner of it turned up so you could see the gritted teeth just grinding together and smoke coming out of his nose and wisps rising from his scalp. That's what I saw when I read in the Bible that one of those characters' anger was kindled. Well, Senator Wickersham kindled my anger. I have no reason to believe that he did not accurately remember what happened. We would have meetings, committee meetings. We'd be dragged out of those committees by Senator Withem, who was bound and determined to do Micron's dirty work, and I said that at the time. And we would come back here and go far into the night because our days were few and we had to give Micron what Micron wanted, and we tussled and tugged and battled and argued, but Micron got what Micron wanted. And I wrote a long poem about Micron and what Micron did not only to Nebraska but to Oklahoma also. And Oklahoma and Nebraska were battling back and forth to see whose attentions would be purchased, and Micron chose to stay right at home in Utah, just moved down the street and around the corner. And here was Nebraska giving up every thing that they had, and I made a comment that Senator Matzke never forgave me for; he never forgave me for and he misquoted me. I said, what this shows that if a person behaves as a prostitute, that person will be treated as a prostitute, and Senator Matzke rendered it at a meeting with me having called everybody a pack of prostitutes. But I've corrected the record now. I remember those things. I read them and I will show him the article, but that's how that comment came about. Nebraska prostrated itself for Micron and lost. They did it for one of those big car companies over in Germany. They even had a radio station in Omaha gathering signatures and they bound them, they bound all these signatures and told how high these volumes stacked,...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...and they flew them over to Germany in the custody of some big shot official, and I'm sure the Germans laughed when they saw it, and that plant went down south, not to Nebraska. There were two or three of them like that, that Nebraska just prostrated itself before, offering everything they
