SENATOR CHAMBERS: Why, even Jimmy Durante or Cyrano de Bergerac wouldn't have done that, and they had a problem with their nose.

SENATOR JONES: Can I tell you about the next sale right here under this?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Yes.

SENATOR JONES: Okay. It was priced to start at $580 an acre, and that man was present. And he said, no way am I going to start it at that, because it's way too high.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So then he...

SENATOR JONES: So it didn't sell either.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So then he went back and bought the $413 an acre, huh? (Laugh)

SENATOR JONES: (Laugh) No, it didn't adjoin him.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Senator Jones. Members of the Legislature, I'm going to tell you again what this boils down to. Hatred of the board. That's all that this is about. They hate that board. I can see it oozing out of Senator Baker every time he speaks. Even our gentle sister Elaine Stuhr stands up and joins. She takes her parasol...now, there's Senator Baker with his Paul Bunyon axe, just whacking away, chopping off everything he can. Then here comes delicate, gentle Senator Stuhr with her scented parasol, and says, tap, tap, tap, and take that, you brute. (Laugh) Tap, tap, tap, tap.

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: They hate the board. I'm just waiting now for...who hasn't...I haven't heard Senator Janssen yet attack them. I'm going to wait and hear his attack. But I still think that we are better off if this land is held onto. And if it is sold, let it be sold for the maximum amount obtainable. And they have been selling land lately, and they've been getting a higher amount than the assessed value would have suggested they would get. And I've heard that admitted. Now, are you going to
