certainly some request for litigation. These people may not be able to...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: ...afford this, Senator Bohlke, but somebody will...will be able to bring that challenge. I just don't think that was our intent at the time of doing it. That certainly wasn't my intent at the time that you were going to broaden who got those, it was some mechanism to narrow it. We can do it. We can leave it "or" and interpret it that you broaden the gates of who gets in. But I would suggest to you, if you're going to do that, is someone who has an eye that they...that they've lost an eye, is that a permanent disability? Yes, it is. Is it one that then you are going to give someone a homestead allowance for? I don't know. If it doesn't...if it isn't precluding their way to make...earn a living, the income guidelines will probably pick them up. But, if not, I just don't know where you'd draw the line with definitions and...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Time. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Senator Chambers, on the Bourne amendment.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. President, members of the Legislature, one of the prior speakers said, I just don't know what we should do in a situation like this. I say we should obey the law. But let me read you what the duty of the Governor is. Article IV, Section 6 of the Nebraska Constitution says, "The supreme executive power shall be vested in the Governor, who shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed and the affairs of the state efficiently and economically administered." Faithful execution of the laws means to carry them out as they are written. And I'm going to give an English lesson to my colleagues. "Or" is a word known as a disjunction; "and" is a conjunction; conjunctions join things; disjunctions push them apart. Now, in reading the language of the law as it exists now, if it was to be construed as those who don't want to spend money, who don't want to admit that the law means what it says, here is what it says, "individuals who have a permanent physical disability or who have lost". If you didn't mean disjunction but rather conjunction, you wouldn't have put "or" in there, in the first place, you would have said the following, "individuals
