because the money to set up the system will be paid for by them.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So when is the...the system will not be set up until money comes in from the system. In other words, there will be no checkoff system implemented by the state until money is derived from that checkoff system. Is that what you're telling me?

SENATOR VRTISKA: No, I'm not telling you that. I'm saying that the money that will come in will, in the long term, pay for the cost.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, who's going to foot the cost to start the system? Who pays the start-up money?

SENATOR VRTISKA: It would come out of the...from the Revenue Department.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And the Revenue Department gets its money from the state. Taxpayer money will be used to set this program up. Isn't that true?

SENATOR VRTISKA: But it will be repaid.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Excuse me?

SENATOR VRTISKA: But it will be repaid.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But if it doesn't bring in enough money to offset what it took to start it, then it will be a deficit on the state. Isn't that true?

SENATOR VRTISKA: Well, the projections are that there will be enough money. If there wasn't enough money, I wouldn't have ever started this, but the projection we've seen from other states and also from the checkoffs that we have has shown a sufficient amount of money.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But the reality is, if it doesn't in fact produce that money, if because of the tightness of the economy people don't want to give anything to something like the State
