FLOOR DEBATE

February 13, 2003 LR 16

result, every voucher I filed was paid off, because that was a debt due and owing to me. The other senators, who were so intimidated they wouldn't even file a voucher though the law said we could, did not get as much when the court came down with a decision and gave us what we were entitled to based on what we had not been receiving. So I got more than all of them. Maybe it was the way the court...

SPEAKER BROMM: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...rewarded me for initiating and pushing through with the action. I don't care what the Attorney General says. There are people on the Appropriations Committee... Senator Wehrbein is not listening, so I'll say that the next time I turn on my light and get recognized, because my time is going to run out. But I'm going to remind Senator Schimek that she said she was going to give me some time, but when she was recognized to speak last time, she waived it off, said, I ain't giving him nothing because he disagrees with me. That's the way I interpret that move. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

SPEAKER BROMM: Thank you, Senator Chambers. (Visitors introduced.) Senator Smith.

SENATOR SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and members. Is this my third time? Second.

SPEAKER BROMM: Second, Senator Smith.

SENATOR SMITH: Thank you. The issue of amending the constitution is very serious. And I don't think that we should pile up a bunch of amendments on the ballot. I believe that it's cumbersome, and it discourages voters. But I'm willing to take up important issues. And I think this is an important issue. However, I'm very concerned about the vagueness and the potential unintended consequences. And let me preface by saying that if we seek to remove any conflict of interest or all conflict of interest or perceived conflict of interest, we'll be unsuccessful. We're too small of a state, we're too small of a society to say that we can remove every bit of perceived conflict of interest. It can be managed, though, quite
