FLOOR DEBATE

February 25, 2003 LB 216

evidence that a crime was committed. They wrote the ticket. Now who's going to prosecute the rascal? A special prosecutor will be appointed. They could have done that in Omaha in the first place. They could have asked a district judge to convene a grand jury. But the "Repelicans" stick together. Mr. President, you said I had one minute?

SENATOR CUDABACK: About 30 seconds.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Then I'm going to turn my light on again.

SENATOR CUDABACK: I recognize you, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Mr. President. And my amendment that I would bring this back...bill back for would prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation by any insurance company. But I need to deal with some other derelictions, to maybe give an idea of why my colleagues on the floor of the Legislature will not vote to do away with discrimination, because they belong to a party whose leaders...Chuck Sigerson was his name...is his name. He was the other one, but they sprung him. They didn't ticket him. So let me get back to what I was talking about. The State Patrol issued the ticket. Now, I have been critical of "Repelicans." There's a "Repelican" among us for whom I have nothing but the greatest respect. Dr. Johnson. There have been others who carried the appellation "Dr. Johnson." One was famous in English literature. Dr. Samuel Johnson. He was witty. He was knowledgeable. But he also was sick, and he was very unsanitary in his habits. A woman from France was talking to him, and she said to him, Dr. Johnson, you smell. He said, madam, no, you smell; I stink. In other words, with the nose you smell. But he was also witty in another respect. This lady from the better part of England was very critical. When she came down where Johnson was eating or drinking at one of these coffee houses, she talked about how she hates this part of London, hated. It's so dirty. It's beneath me. He said, madam, give me an example of something that makes you say that. She said, every time I leave here I have dirt under my fingernails. He said, well, madam, the cure for that is not to scratch yourself. Oh, these Johnsons are people you've got to watch out for. Well, our colleague,
