them here in our Constitution. But they would be separate. Which means, potentially, you could probably have four more casinos in the state. But I don't believe that that will happen. I truly don't believe that will happen. And...but we don't...we can't guarantee that ahead of time, of course. I would like to take the rest of my time to address, in part, at least, the Omaha World-Herald editorial this morning, which I find a little hard to believe that it is quoting somebody who directs the National Coalition Against Legalized Gambling, in an essay they wrote that has absolutely, absolutely no facts or figures in it. And then they throw out the line that we need to be able to refute these arguments. What arguments? There aren't any substantial arguments in this editorial. There are no facts or figures in this editorial. I'd like to also say that I just passed out a little news story that comes from Providence, Rhode Island. And it tells about the Pottawattamie County supervisor, Bob Williams, and the mayor of Council Bluffs, Tom Hanafan, going to Rhode Island to tell them about Iowa's experience with casinos. And the county supervisor says, "We found out that everything they said would be bad turned out not to be bad. We've had great economic development in our area. Our city is now solvent." It goes on to say that...and these are remarks, I believe, attributed to Hanafan...that "Iowa insisted that Harrah's and Ameristar build all the restaurants, roads, and hotels, anything that had to happen to make the projects work." And they did. "Harrah's and Ameristar also heed state regulations that, quote, they have to buy goods, as much as they can, from Iowa, unquote, from carpets and paint to peas and bread. The city of Council Bluffs receives one-half of one percent of the total handle, the same amount as the county. That equals roughly $40,000 per week for each, he said. We also receive 50 cents per head for anyone who walks onto the riverboats, but not the dog track. Other direct impacts of the three Pottawattamie County gaming facilities include tax revenue collected from the casinos, including nearly $5 million in property taxes." And then it goes on to say that a referendum last September for continuing gaming licenses...and in Iowa they have to do that...passed, in Pottawattamie County, by 80 percent. And you will see on the green sheet that was also passed out to you, the Iowa gambling vote, the last vote they took, which...
