March 4, 2003 LR 11

the Capitol with top dollar. They'll put a castle by the river, but only if Chris can deliver. They promise the world to me and you, hoping the Legislature knows what to do. Offering jobs, tourism, and good things, while covering the true effect of the betting. They promise a destination for young and old, to keep Nebraskans in the fold. They'll shake the last penny from your hand, while we hope for business and jobs on our land. Oh, what a day that will be, if Chris and Andy could both live back in NE. With all the goodness that Andy will bring, all Nebraskans can say, bring on the slot machine! Should the voters give the nod, to bring these castles to Nebraska sod, young Andy may have to resign, leaving the Venetian blind. It's interesting that we have a lot of these groups that want to come into the state of Nebraska and want to do it for whatever reason. And the way that they are going to do that is no different now than later, and that is that they are going to continue to try and promote some ideas to the public that this is somehow going to benefit them in some substantial way. Again, the reality of the situation is that once we've opened this up, and if we haven't answered all the questions that are here before us today, we're going to be faced with additional lawsuits and additional challenges to our constitution that we currently don't see right now. So from that standpoint, I appreciate the discussion. I've learned a lot. I appreciate Senator Schimek's and Senator Beutler's willingness to address some of these concerns because I don't think they've had them fully answered yet, but I do appreciate their willingness to talk about this. Because, again, this is the only time this will be debated in the state of Nebraska if this would go to the people. Thank you.

SPEAKER BROMM: Thank you, Senator Erdman. Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Mr. Speaker, members of the Legislature, it has been a good debate, and a not unexpected debate. And it is important to raise all questions at this point in time, whether they're entirely valid, slightly valid, or maybe only marginally valid. But I just wanted to take a second, and I don't know if anybody has talked about the Iowa gambling vote. You know, in Iowa, earlier the question was put to the people of Iowa whether they wanted to continue the casino system that they had or they
