LR 11

They came away with what they brought. You've got one on the left who actually won, and everybody looks at that one who was a winner and all of the evidence to the contrary is disregarded. Many people view themselves as losers anyway, so the aspiration of the loser is to be a winner, so you look for a winner, and when you find somebody in your line of work who is a winner, that's the one you focus on. In most instances that may not be bad, but when it comes to being a sucker it's not the way to go. Casinos make money off the suckers. They cannot turn back more money than they take in or they would be out of business. Other people look at that like recreation or fun time. These people make psychological profiles. They study the kind of people who come and they want to make sure that they continue to come, and they give advertisements that will draw others. And when people want to talk about animals, especially reptiles, fish and amphibians being members of the lower order, human beings are the ones who should be able to see through a lure, to see through bait, but human beings don't because human beings see what somebody tells them to see, or they see what they want to see, or what is convenient to be seen. So when you have as much money being spent on lobbying these bills as is being spent, whose interest do you think will be served if this bill gets on the ballot and is voted into the constitution? Whose interest is being served, brothers and sisters? Quiet as a tomb in here. I hope it's because people are listening, but maybe they're asleep. The interests of those who are going to make money from this are the ones whose interests are being served, and the ones who make enough money for it to be a thriving business are the ones who operate the casinos, who sell the equipment, and...

SENATOR HARTNETT: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...can lure the suckers. And it's being
