April 15, 2003 LB 435

Senator Foley, I'm not sure about your amendment at this point, what I'm going to do about it. I think it is, maybe, a compromise position. I don't personally want to do it, but, you know, at some point in time if it becomes necessary. I wasn't...I really wasn't going to speak on this issue, because I thought there would be plenty of people speaking in favor of this issue. And I haven't had...I haven't heard very many voices besides Senator Foley's and Senator Beutler's speaking in favor of this issue. And I've been listening carefully. And I believe there are two kinds of experts that should have a say in this issue. One is the business owner, who is the expert who has to pay the minimum wage. The second person is the person who works for the employer and gets the minimum wage. And who's speaking for that expert on this floor? Senator Beutler is and Senator Foley is. And they are talking about the person who has trouble meeting the kinds of expenses that all of us are having to face now, rises in all kinds of things: increase in natural gas bills are coming very soon for all of us living here in Lincoln and some other parts of the state; a rise in state park fees; a rise in fees, possibly, for fishing and hunting. You know, you just think about all the kinds of little fees and little extra taxes that both state government and local government are imposing in these hard times, and then you picture yourself living on $5.15 per hour. Not very doable, even if you're a college student. And I think that we...that's another thing I didn't even mention, is the rise...or the raise in tuition that we've already imposed, that we are most likely going to impose again. I think that Senator Cunningham has a legitimate point of view, and I understand his concern. But those...I served on the Business and Labor Committee for 12 years in this body, and those are always the arguments that I hear. It doesn't matter whether we're having a recessionary period of a poor economy or what. The arguments are always the same, and that is that it will increase not only the wages at the very bottom rung of the ladder, but it will increase those wages on every other rung of the ladder, and that it will drive the small business owner out of business. And it never happens. It just doesn't happen, unless maybe those businesses are teetering so near the edge that they're going to go out of business anyway. What happens is, the business owner makes a practical decision and passes the cost along to the customer.
