April 15, 2003 LB 435

extrapolation from that that moved us from earth to heaven. And Jesus said, there is more rejoicing in heaven over one who was lost being found than over the ninety-nine who need no finding. That one is very important. And when we can gear our thinking and our conduct to being addressed toward that one, who nobody else may even be conscious of, it's going to make us grow. It's going to make us better. We live and think on a higher plane. Because it's not in the numbers that determines the quality of the act. It is determined by how much need there is and how much we're willing to address that need. Not only will the good shepherd go after that one that is lost, but the good shepherd will lay down his life for the sheep. When the ravening wolf comes, when the bear comes, the hireling flees, because the hireling dresses like a shepherd, has a crook like a shepherd, wears sandals like a shepherd, but he has the heart of a coward. Little David, who became King of Israel, was a shepherd. Because he went in a den, bearded a lion in his den, and smote him, which means he killed him. That's the way they talked in those days. The shepherd risked his life for the sheep. We're not shepherds. We're not called upon to be willing to risk our lives for anything. All that we are asked to do is to look out...

SPEAKER BROMM: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...into the population, become aware that there are people with serious problems, recognize the fact that we took an oath, and somewhere within that oath's meaning is a pledge to help those who cannot help themselves, or to help those who can be benefited by that help we offer. Senator Redfield is extending a bit of help. I don't have any choice other than to support her amendment. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

SPEAKER BROMM: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Foley.

SENATOR FOLEY: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, members. I rise in support of the Redfield amendment. Thank you, Senator Redfield, for jumping into this and offering us a way out. I had tried to offer a compromise earlier today, and it was premature, because Senator Beutler just only introduced the bill. He was still wedded to that green copy of the bill, as were the other
