that I know of. Up in South Dakota, you walk in, you pay your $10 and they ask you some questions and that's, as far as I know, that's it. That's what a number of people told me has...was done when they went to apply for their concealed carry. They have had a number of years of experience with it and it's a nonissue. I really hate to see this come to an end after we pass this on Final and the government (sic) signs it because it will then become a nonissue. It will be one less thing for Senator Chambers to talk about. He'll have to spend all of his time discussing our Attorney General. This is a statement: Both John B. Holmes, Harris County, that's Houston, District Attorney, and Glenn White, president of the Dallas Police Association, initially opposed concealed carry in Texas, but have subsequently embraced it. Holmes said, quote, I felt such legislation presented a clear and present danger to law-abiding citizens by placing more handguns on our streets. Boy, was I wrong. Our experience in Harris County and, indeed, statewide has proved my initial feel...fears absolutely groundless. And White said, quote, all horror stories I thought would come to pass didn't happen. He went on to say, I think it's worked out well and it says good things about the citizens who have permits. I am a convert. Two more states have joined and, while I would never stand here and say, well, Colorado did it and New Mexico did it so we should do it, we should do what this body determines is the best policy for the state of Nebraska. What I hope to convince people of is that this is good public policy. This is public policy that...

SPEAKER BROMM: One minute.

SENATOR TYSON: ...allows people to defend themselves under certain circumstances and with certain strictures. It has been stated a number of times, including several times in court, that the police have no obligation to come to your aid. I covered that when we were on General. They...there's not that many police, folks. We can't afford that many police. And their general duty is to provide a peaceful community, and they do that job, but they're thin on the ground. You take all the police officers in the state of Nebraska, if you want to know how many can, at most, be on duty at one time, take the total number, divide by four, because there's four shifts in a week, a
