the road and a patrolman stops him and finds out there's a gun in the vehicle, what are the ramifications now?

SENATOR TYSON: Is the gun visible?

SENATOR SCHROCK: Concealed.

SENATOR TYSON: Not to put too fine a thread on it, how does he find out that it's concealed? He searches the car?

SENATOR SCHROCK: No, the driver of the car says to the officer, I do have a weapon in the car when he is stopped.

SENATOR TYSON: Under 28-1202, the officer could proceed.

SENATOR SCHROCK: I know of several cases where that happens and the officer has thanked the person for informing him and that's been the end of the conversation.

SENATOR TYSON: Say that again, please.

SENATOR SCHROCK: I know of some...I know of a couple instances when that has happened and the officer has thanked them for the information and nothing has happened.

SENATOR TYSON: Senator Schrock, they happened to run into a very sensible police officer. I, at the hearing, the committee hearing, a man approached me, I did not know him, told me the city he was from. He was out shooting with a rifle, not a concealed handgun, didn't have a handgun in the car, didn't own one. He was out shooting varmints. He came back. He was stopped for a taillight. The man who stopped him was a city policeman; looked in the back of his pickup and saw the rifle and confiscated it. This is the city of Grand Island, and he had to practically bring on a replevin action to get his rifle back. That was the policy of the Grand Island Police Department. I don't know...I don't know...he didn't tell me when that happened, but it was evidently a fairly recent occurrence, and that police officer had no right whatsoever to confiscate the rifle. It wasn't loaded, incidentally. He was finished shooting. What I...I think the answer to your
